Wednesday, October 27. 1714.

From the Brussels Gazette, dated Oct. 26.

Naples, September 23.

Wednesday last being the Day of St. Januarius our Protector, Count Daun our Viceroy and Madam the Countess his Spouse assisted at the Mass solemnized upon that Occasion, where the Concourse of the Nobility and People was very great, and they had the Consolation to see the usual Miracle succeed of the Liquefaction of the coagulated Blood, as well on the Day of the Feast as on the other Days of the Octave. On Thursday Monseigneur Vincenti, Apostolick Nuncio, had a particular Audience of the Viceroy. His Excellency went to the Arsenal two Days ago to see some new Cannon cast, and to view the Construction of a new Man of War which is there building. The same Day one of the six Gallies of our Squadron returned, which is opened and sent to be repaired. We understand by that Way, that Count Fuenfaldia, General of those Gallies, has pursued his Voyage with his Squadron along the Coasts in pursuit of the Corsairs.

From the Paris Gazette, dated Oct. 27.

Naples, Sept. 25. We learn by divers Letters from Apulia, that the Corsairs of Barbary appear often upon the Coasts of this Kingdom, and that they have landed some Men on the Coast of Otranto, where they have carried off 30 Slaves and some Booty. They attempted also to land in Abruzzo, but those of that Country, who were upon their Guard, coming in attacked them so vigorously that they were obliged to fly to their Ships with some precipitation, after divers Men were killed and wounded; but the Gallies of this Kingdom have been reinforced with 160 German Soldiers drawn from the Troops which are in Reggio, and are gone in pursuit of them. The Parrone Galley having suffered great Damage by a severe Tempest which they met with in passing the Straights of Messina, the General has been obliged to send it hither from Reggio with the sick Men, and pursue his Voyage with the rest of his Squadron. The same Tempest drove divers Barks and Tartans, which had the Equipage of the King of Sicily on board, into divers Ports, but they are since sailed with a fair Wind. The Deputation for Health have published severe Ordonances to hinder all Communication with Countries suspected of Contagion.

From the Gazette a la Main, dated Oct. 27.

Paris, Oct. 31. 'Tis said an expedient is found out for recompensing part of the Troops which will remain on Foot, and even the reformed Officers, without Charge to the State; which on the contrary will receive Advantage from it, since it proposes to re-people the Country, and give Opportunity to many Families to make profitable Settlements among them.

Letters from Lisbon advise, that the Ambassador of France has made rich Presents to the Queen for the young Prince, to whom he stood Godfather in the Name of his most Christian Majesty. They write also, that the Corsairs of Algiers have made a Descent upon the Azores Islands, whence they have carried off 300 People into Slavery.

The King of Spain has erected an Academy of 24 Persons, whereof the Duke d'Escalona will be Director, to improve and polish the Castilian Tongue. His Majesty has also resolved to form two Companies of Mulqueeters like those of the King of France.

Dorchester in Dorsetshire, Oct. 27. 1714. Yesterday we had great Rejoycings in this Town on the glorious Occasion of King George's Coronation at London. The Day was kept with great Solemnity, and at Night we had Bonfires, Illuminations, ringing of Bells, &c. The Evening was concluded with burning Monsieur the Pretender in very great Formality and Ceremony, &c. and the whole was concluded without any Disorder. The same Day was kept in all the Neighbouring Parts with all agreeable Diversions and Merriments, except some few of the Gentry, who dined at one another's Houses, and would not contribute to the Expences of the general Rejoycings in their own Parishes: But none distinguished themselves more Loyal than John Michel, Junior, Esq; about five Miles out of Town, who roasted a whole Ox on his fine Downes of Kingston-Russel, and treated upwards of 2000 People with Beer and Bisket, and in the Evening made a noble Bonfire on the same Place, which being on a large swelling Eminence suitable for that purpose, might be seen almost to Plymouth near 80 Miles West, and at the Needles in the Isle of Wight 40 Miles East; and after drinking several loyal Healths &c. the Crowd dispersed themselves to their several Habitations, very well pleased with their Hospitable Entertainment, and the happy Occasion of it, crying God Save King George.
